

COMMUNITY CONVERSATION CAFÉ

SUSTAINABILITY & UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF THE NORTH

How is education contributing to a more sustainable world? Come share your experiences with how the University College of the North is supporting the transition to a healthier planet!

Welcoming stakeholders engaged with the education system including municipal councillors and employees, chamber of commerce representatives, environmental networks, social justice organizations, Indigenous organizations, and others.

Wednesday, April 13, 2016
The Pas Regional Library - Annex
53 Edwards Ave., The Pas, MB
5:30 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Kathryn Riley
kathryn.riley@usask.ca

Food and refreshments will be served

Everyone is welcome! Please share with anyone who might be interested in joining the discussion

What is a Community Conversation Café?

This community conversation café will bring community members together to have an open discussion about what the University College of the North is doing, and what it could be doing better, to contribute to environmental sustainability and a healthy planet.

What is SEPN?

This community café is part of a national study examining sustainability uptake in policy and practice across the Canadian formal education system. Researchers from the Sustainability and Education Policy Network (SEPN) will be here to do a focus group with community members exploring what you think the University College of the North (UCN) is doing well, and what more it could be doing, to contribute to environmental sustainability at UCN and a healthy planet.